Because of Infield Shifts

The second defeat at the hands of Cleveland was a solid thump on the jaw of the Highlanders and knocked them out of the first division. While we were taking our medicine from the Larruppers the Boston Speedboys managed to trim the Tigers in a drawn out fight and we had to back out of the percentage table and give them room. It is an ill wind that blows nobody good, however, for the Athletics, while taking an afternoon off and watching the patter of the rain drops, crawled to within a fraction of one point of first place. It begins to look as if the Tigers were doomed now, as they will have to finish their campaign in the East, while the Athletics close up at home.

About as pleasant a diversion for the Brooklyn men as anything that can be imagined, and they did it with a little something to spare yesterday. The three home runs that were made in the fifth inning made a batting record that will stand for some time as a mark to be shot at. While the first homer in that round was something of a fluke, the other two were of the regulation

Eddle Zimmerman was not entitled to in right field. Schulte was unable to as for a parter. The long hits by Erwin and Wheat were hard hit blows that dropped into the right field bleachers, and the ball was high over the fielder's head.

The Superbas are proving a harder nut for the Cubs to crack this trip than they did on their last visit here. The opening game on Wednesday was won only after some sensational pitching cy Cole, but vesterday's game was so much in favor of the visitors that the honors so far in the series have been all in favor of the Dodgers. Grand fielding stunts by the other members of the team outside of the pitching department have had much to do with the success of the team here.

The general impression here is that Dahlen will have a strong enough team next year to break into the first division.

And in the mean while let us not forget that there is some race still on in the National League. The Giants made a gain on the Cubs by not playing while the Dodgers were whipping the latter. The New Yorkers are just one full game behind the Chicagoans, but they haven't a chance to pass them to-day, as the Cubs have no game scheduled, the New York-Pittsburg contest being the only one in the National League.
